ARBITRATION VOTE BRINGS HOPE FOR STRIKE SETTLEMENT

Union Labor Decides To Arbitrate All Issues In San Francisco Case

OTHERS DEADLOCKED

Food Shortage in Pacific Coast City Being Gradually Lifted

By International News Service

A vote by union labor to arbitrate all issues, brought definite promise today of a settlement in the disastrous San Francisco general strike, but the warring factions of other strikes in the nation remained deadlocked.

On this the third day of the San Francisco general strike the food shortage in the metropolitan area was being gradually lifted. However, 120,000 workers still remained on strike pending the outcome of the mediation move.

By a vote of 207 to 180 the San Francisco labor council general strike committee moved to present their grievances by arbitration to the President's mediation board. Approximately 140,000 union workers remained on strike on the Pacific coast.

One field artillery battalion of the Minneapolis National Guard was being held in the armory at Minneapolis to quell any violence that might arise in the strike of 7,000 union truck drivers there. Virtually all commercial trucking in Minneapolis was at a standstill.

In Alabama approximately 15,000 textile workers were on strike. Police had to quell several demonstrations by picketers.

At Portland, Oregon, E. E. Pettengill, president of the Central Labor Council, announced that the threatened general strike there was only a remote possibility. Senator Robert F. Wagner, Democrat of New York, arrived in Portland to confer with labor leaders.

Addressing a large audience at the University of California, in Berkeley, General Hugh S. Johnson, head of the N. R. A., branded the general strike as "civil war."

An attempt at mediation of the issues was to begin today in the strike of union workers at the Kohler Company factory at Kohler, Wisconsin, where picket lines have prevented all workers from entering the plant.

The truck drivers' union, numbering about 800 men, went on strike in Baltimore where efforts to reach a conciliation failed.

Body of Woman Identified By Relatives at Woodbury

WOODBURY, N. J., July 18—(INS)—An attractive, red-haired young woman, with a diamond set in her left eye-tooth, who died under mysterious circumstances on a Paulsboro street, was identified early today as Mrs. Mabel Peterson, 29, of Williamsport, Pa.

Gloucester county authorities announced that identification was established by unnamed relatives in a mortuary here. Descriptions of the dead woman had been broadcast throughout New Jersey and Pennsylvania by state police. Photographs, finger prints and descriptions of the dental work, including the diamond-studded tooth, were sent to police authorities of principal cities before the victim's relatives stepped forward to identify her.

Meantime, the cause of Mrs. Peterson's death continued to baffle investigators as they sought a man for questioning.

Two men conversing on a street corner in Paulsboro early yesterday saw the woman stagger momentarily and then collapse. She was pronounced dead upon arrival at Underwood hospital.

The woman was addicted to liquor and subject to fits, relatives informed police, according to County Detective W. Clayton Apgar. Police revealed that she left her home in Williamsport about a week ago with Robert Lynch, a boarder. Lynch is being sought for questioning in an effort to shed light on some unaccountable circumstances surrounding the woman's death.

Apgar said authorities believe the woman may have died from a blood clot on the brain, suffered in a fall within the past two weeks. Bruises on her body, police said, also may have been received in the fall.

An autopsy performed by physicians here failed to reveal the exact cause of death. The woman's organs were sent to Underwood hospital for chemical analysis.

Red Cross Service To Be Extended To Coast Guards

Members of the United States Coast Guard, numbering approximately 12,000 officers and men, will be extended the same Red Cross service which has been provided during and since the World War to members of the Army and Navy, it was announced from Red Cross National Headquarters, Washington.

Under Federal statutes the Coast Guard is a part of the military forces of the United States, operating under the Treasury Department in peace time and as a part of the navy in time of war. Red Cross service has been extended at the request of Admiral H. G. Hamlet, commandant of the United States Coast Guard and will be a part of the service of Red Cross Chapters and field directors, operating on the same basis as for the personnel of the Army and Navy.

The Coast Guard and the Red Cross have long cooperated in disaster relief operations. The Coast Guard has provided boats and men promptly and freely, and chapters has welcomed opportunities to show the Coast Guard that they may depend upon Red Cross service, just as do the Army and Navy.

DREDGE MOORED HERE BEING RECONDITIONED

"The Pittsburgh," One of The Largest Dredges, Is Being Overhauled, Painted

17 MEN ON THE JOB

One of the largest dredges in the world, "The Pittsburgh," which has been tied up at the Market street wharf for the past several weeks, is being reconditioned.

The dredge, the most powerful of any dredge in existence for one of its size, is now in the hands of a corps of 17 workers, all busily engaged in overhauling and refurbishing it.

Parts of the machinery are being scraped and oiled; some of the boilers are being overhauled; new valves being placed; and general repair work being carried on on both the metal and frame portions.

The reconditioning process also includes the scraping and painting of the craft, the paint being of a battle-ship gray. The super-structure and sides are now in the hands of the painters. The scraping and painting process is carried on about twice yearly. The 17 men now engaged in the reconditioning work are the dredge's key men.

The huge dredge measures 40 feet in width, with a length of 162 feet extended to 210 feet when the dredging ladder is included.

"The Pittsburgh," with two other dredges, recently completed dredging the Delaware River from a point just below the Burlington-Bristol bridge to the Tacony-Palmyra bridge. In that project approximately two and one-half million yards of excavation took place.

The reconditioning program is being carried on while the dredge crew is awaiting appropriations for the dredging of the upper Delaware from a point south of the Burlington-Bristol bridge to Trenton.

"The Pittsburgh" is captained by M. E. McLeod, of Frankford.

Warsaw, July 18—With 88 bodies already recovered from the disastrous floods in southern Poland, it was feared today the death list would exceed 125. CONNOR BABY "NOT KIDNAPPED"

Hartsdale, July 18—"Finis" was written today to the mysterious disappearance of 20-months-old Bobby Connor. So far as police and Federal authorities are concerned the case is closed. The child who disappeared from in front of his home here last Thursday, was not kidnapped, he was lost in the thicket, authorities concluded today, after carefully considering all theories of the case. Bobby, who was found half a mile from his home yesterday in a partially starved condition, wandered about the thicket for five days, unseen by the numerous searching parties which were supposed to have scoured every square inch of ground within a five-mile radius of the Connor home, police admitted. Dr. Claud W. Munger, who has the child in charge, blasted the theory of police that Bobby had been wandering alone since his disappearance last Thursday.

FIRST-HALF WINNERS DEFEAT CORNWELLS A. A.

Firemen Blanked From Fifth Inning When Black Takes Mound

SCORE ENDS AT 7 TO 4

HULMEVILLE, July 18—Fine relief twirling by Howard Black backed by good hitting in the pinches gave the Hulmeville A. A. team its fourth victory of the second half of the Lower Bucks County League here last night. Cornwells A. A. was the losing club with the final figures being 7-4.

Black went to the hill in the fifth inning after Stan Vanzant had left the premises because a blister developed on his "grip" finger. Black blanked the firemen for the remainder of the game and in the meantime his mates showed three runs across the plate for the victory.

Of the nine hits made by the winners, one-third went to Leon Comly, burly third-sacker. Comly had a perfect night, getting a pass and three hits. "Bill" Dougherty, former Bristol Twilight League star, continued his brilliant hitting for the losers with three bingles. The base-running of Warren Bruce also stood out. Bruce stole second and third in the first and later in the game again stole third. On both occasions he scored.

AGED DOYLESTOWN MAN ENDS HIS LIFE WITH A REVOLVER

Roland R. Peterman, 73, Informed He "Couldn't Stand Pain Any Longer"

IN ILL HEALTH

Injured Man Found On Floor of Home by Niece; Dies 4 Hours Later

DOYLESTOWN, July 18—A Doylestown man ended his life yesterday with a revolver, the note he wrote just before the suicidal action stating that he "couldn't stand the pain any longer."

The victim is Roland R. Peterman, 73. Peterman, who resided at 274 Logan street, was found by his niece when she arrived at the Peterman home to prepare a meal for the aged man. She found her uncle lying on the floor in the upper hall, still alive.

A physician was summoned, but death occurred about four hours later.

Peterman had called at the office of a physician here, Monday evening, for treatment. Arrangements were made at that time for the man to go to Abington Memorial Hospital yesterday for an operation. Peterman also later arranged with Constable Frank Bertles to take him to that institution yesterday. He had been in ill health for several years.

The note left by Peterman was found on a kitchen table. In it Peterman selected the undertaker he wanted and also directed that he be buried next to his wife, Mrs. Amy Elizabeth Peterman, who died three years ago when they lived on Decatur street.

Peterman was a machinist by trade but for a number of years was agent for several companies manufacturing farm machinery.

The deceased is survived by five sons, Edward, of New Castle; George, of Buffalo; Irvin, of Connecticut; and twins, Harry, of Lansdale, and Howard, of Willow Grove. A brother, Clifton Peterman, also survives.

Girl Hurt Resisting Alleged Attempted Attack

Two Bristol young men were taken into custody by Bristol police and Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo early this morning, following an alleged attempted attack by one upon a young woman near Green Lane.

The story as related to the officers by Miss Margaret Koch, 17, of Pond street, and Miss Margie Marshall, 17, of 905 Jefferson avenue, is that as they were walking along the Emfille Road toward Edgely, last night, they were offered a ride by Earl Hovatter and Alfred McVaine, both of Beaver Dam Road.

Later the girls claim the party halted on Green Lane Road where it is alleged that Hovatter attempted to attack the Marshall girl. She told officers of leaping from the machine and of a subsequent chase by Hovatter.

Screams of the girl were heard at about one a. m., by Lewis Harris, 406 Jefferson avenue, who was passing by. Hovatter to the municipal building. Harris notified police, who went at once to the scene. The two girls were finally located at the home of Paul Grunert, nearby. The Marshall girl was suffering from an injured nose, and was bleeding profusely as the result of the injury. She was in a highly hysterical condition, officers report. The two were later taken to their homes.

Hovatter and McVaine were located on Farragut avenue as they were repairing a flat tire. The two were taken into custody and detained in the municipal building until this morning.

Hovatter was later arrested on a charge of assault and battery, and attempted rape. At a hearing before Justice of the peace James Guy in the municipal building he was held to $1,000 bail. McVaine was released.

INSECT MILLENNIUM

Agriculture's worst enemy, the insect, has recruited billions of new members to his vast legions this summer and vanquished man on every front. Man's best trained forces have been driven back and his strongest fortresses have been easily overcome. It has been a costly defeat.

Nature has been on the side of the insect pestilence for two years, and Nature is still supreme. Two dry hot years gave the insect armies their chance. They multiplied faster than the best devices of man could exterminate them and this summer they have swept down upon crops, gardens and shrubs in seldom equaled hordes.

Federal agriculturists consider this the most prolific bug year in a decade. Not only are the more harmless insect nuisances unusually prevalent but the insect despoilers of vegetation are present in larger numbers.

Government can spend millions annually in warring on insect enemies and then see all its work and money go for naught. Nature is the ally whose support determines the winner in this eternal battle. Should she next intercede for man by sending some cold winters and wet summers the invasion of bugs will recede again to await a more propitious time.

No doubt even this buggiest year finds fewer insect parasites than there would be if man had never made war against his insect neighbors, but the experience of the last two years has shown the apparent hopelessness of the fight.

HOW DO YOU READ?

"Tell me what you eat, and I will tell you what you are," has cried a publicist so often that he has coined a household axiom. Well might another say: "Tell me what you read and I will tell you what you are!"

The mind is the house in which we live more truly than is the body. If we furnish the mind garishly we must live in a garish house. If we take our mental furniture only from the past, we shall live in the past alone. If we take it only from the faddish notions of the present we shall live in fads and fables, which vanish as we know them.

But in, on the other hand, our mental diet is balanced, comprised of the foods tested by time and sauced and spiced by the piquancy of the present we may live a balanced, ordered life.

We can with impunity pour poisons and dark, wild, disordered thoughts into our minds no more than we can day after day find strength and health from spurious foods, hastily prepared, indigestible.

To read well, read discriminately, widely, thoroughly.

What we read becomes part and parcel of us.

From the number of motor cars encountered on the highways during week-ends and holidays, it is evident there are many persons who have no trouble in deciding how to spend their leisure.

The tragic part of it is that any nation could buy territory for less than the cost of stealing.

Being upper class is state. You just do as you please and leave the rest to your lawyer.

SUMMER TIME is a busy time for Ready Kilowatt
Your Electrical Servant

With an electric fan he gives us a pleasant zephyr all the long summer day . . . he keeps our food fresh, and gives us tinkling cubes of ice to cool our summer drinks.

He runs an exhaust fan in the kitchen and harnesses to a vacuum cleaner he gathers the dust that blows in through open windows and doors.

He makes it convenient to change our summer linen frequently because he washes and irons it so easily. And when Ready Kilowatt cooks a meal on an electric range the kitchen remains as comfortable as any part of the house.

Your Electrical Servant never needs a vacation, and his wages amount to only a few cents a day.

"DEATH SONG"

by JOAN CLAYTON AND MALCOLM LOGAN

CHAPTER XIX

The sheriff almost snatched the photograph from Mark's hands. As he bent his head over it, there was a queer conflict of emotions apparent in his face. His first reaction was one of triumph. As he looked more closely, his mouth drooped and he frowned with disappointment. Then he nodded to himself and looked more cheerful.

"Who took it?" he asked.

"I did," Loren said. "I did it with my little camera."

"And you saw this gardener and didn't tell anybody about it?"

"I didn't know the gardener was in the picture until Mark pointed it out to me a minute ago."

"I don't see how you overlooked him. He's right there in front of your eyes."

"The camera finder is about half an inch by three-quarters," Loren pointed out. "It's no wonder I didn't see him when I looked in it."

"Didn't you look at the cottage after you took the picture?"

"No. I snapped the picture and then turned around and walked into the woods by the lake."

"What were you doing there?" Finn asked.

"He was waiting there for me," Sue said.

Finn grinned at her. "I admire his taste," he said. He looked at the photograph again.

"If we get this enlarged, we might have something," he said. "Where's the film?"

Mark handed it to him. "I'd like to keep these, if you don't mind. Mr. Ruxton," the sheriff said.

"You're welcome to them," Loren replied. "I hope they help you, but I don't think an enlargement will."

Finn grinned as he put them in his pocket. "I don't know," he said. "They may help a lot."

He left, and presently James Ruxton and his nephew went too. I was about to follow when Dr. Calvert arrived. He nodded curtly to all of us and his eyes brightened as he looked at Sue. She smiled at him and for a moment a faint reflection of that smile lit his severe face.

"What do you think of the boy detective now?" Mark crowed.

"Why, I'm practically Finn's right-hand man."

"You're clever, Mark," the doctor replied. "But you don't need me to tell you."

"Have you heard about the photograph Loren took, doctor?" Sue asked eagerly.

At the mention of Loren's name the doctor's jaw tightened.

"Yes," he said. "I've just been conferring with the sheriff."

"You have?" Mark said. "Then maybe you can tell me why he's looking so pleased with himself. I suppose he's found a gardener who hasn't an alibi, hasn't he?"

The doctor looked startled. "How did you know that, Mark?" he asked.

"Oh, Bob always brings me all the gossip," Mark said. "There's a rumor to that effect going around, and it was quite easy to see that the sheriff thinks everything's going nicely."

"The sheriff will be glad to hear that," Calvert said gloomily.

"Where was Barker?" I asked.

"He says he was at Walnut Cottage, the second one from Lakeside. No one saw him, of course. How could anyone be expected to see him during rest period, when everybody's in bed?"

"Is Barker under arrest?" Mark asked quietly.

"No," said the doctor. He looked at us belittlingly. "He won't be either, if I can help it, until Finn gets more proof than he has now."

"If Finn could get him in town and sweat him, he might get a confession," Mark said.

"Yes," Calvert answered angrily, "that's just what he's counting on!"

anything's possible in this case. Anything," he turned to Calvert.

"Where are the overalls now?"

"They're being examined in the laboratory."

"Could you get a look at them?"

"I think so."

"Employees' clothes are washed at the sanatorium laundry, aren't they?" Mark asked.

"Yes, I think so."

"Why don't you check up on the laundry mark and find out if the overalls belong to Barker? And tell the sheriff, when you have an opportunity, that I can vouch for the innocence of the other two gardeners. I'd like to see him again."

"I certainly shall," the doctor answered. "I'd better go back now

"He's got one of the gardeners, a poor devil named Joe Barker, who can't prove where he was during rest period."

Well, there's not going to be any third degree as long as I have any authority here!"

"I see," Mark said, as though to himself. "Finn wants a conviction. The business office wants the case cleared up and hushed up. Barker would do very nicely for everyone."

The doctor's shoulders straightened.

"There are some of us who are interested in convicting the right man," he said quietly.

He looked almost handsome as he said that, standing defiantly with his head thrown back and his muscles flexed as though he were braced himself for an attack. I looked at Sue. There was admiration in her eyes as she watched him. She asked, "But if it wasn't a gardener, who was it?"

"I don't know," Dr. Calvert said. "I'm not sure it wasn't one of the gardeners, and as two are accounted for, that leaves only Joe. But I'm not going to see him beaten into confessing."

"The sheriff isn't even considering the possibility that the murderer might have disguised himself as a gardener, I suppose," Mark said.

The doctor turned sharply and looked at him.

"No, he isn't. I hadn't even considered it myself."

"I'm afraid the sheriff will be very hard to convince on that point," Mark said.

"Do you seriously think that's possible, Mr. Hillyer?" Sue asked.

and see that they don't take Joe away when I'm not watching."

I left Mark's room that afternoon more mystified than I had been after talking to him in the morning. He had made me suspect both John Calvert and Loren Ruxton, yet both had now given what seemed to me good proof of their innocence. Suspicion is such a hardy emotion that my doubts of the two men remained, yet it was impossible to reconcile those doubts with what I had just seen.

The case against John Calvert seemed to me decidedly the weaker of the two. Willis Clendening had seen, or imagined that he had seen, some sort of paper or note on the table in Felipe's room. It had disappeared, and if such a paper had existed, no one had a better opportunity to take it than Dr. Calvert himself. It seemed to me impossible, however, that the physician would have taken it unless it implicated him. Yet now he was fighting to save a man whom he believed to be innocent. I had felt a warm admiration for him when he told us about his refusal to turn the gardener over to the sheriff, and it was difficult for me to believe that a man guilty of murder would not have welcomed a false accusation against another. It occurred to me that the note might have incriminated some one whom he wished to protect, but not at the cost of an innocent man's life. I decided to speak to Mark about that next morning.

RUBINO SETS BACK THE DAMP WASH; SCORE, 8-4

BRISTOL TWILIGHT LEAGUE
Schedule for Tonight
DAMP WASH vs. ST. ANN'S
(Leedom's field)
(By T. M. Juno)

Tired of seeing his team's pitchers being slapped all over the diamond, Manager Joe Rubino, of the Independents, took it upon himself to check in with the Independents' first win of the second half. Rubino set back the Damp Wash A. A. with four hits as he scored an 8-4 win.

The fray was a comedy of errors. Twelve "dot marks" were pencilled in the "E" column of the scorebook as the players of both teams booted and made overthrows with the horsehide all during the match. Each club had six errors.

But Manager Rubino had the situation well under control and when in danger always bore down to escape serious damage. In the fourth one of his pitches was whaled for a triple by "Dom" Brescia with two runners on base and in the opening canto, Fekner caught hold of a hook and dove in to fight for three bases to score Mulligan.

Eight base-runners were left by the Washers. Five of the runners reached base on errors while passes put the others on base. This in itself tells the story of the masterful pitching of the Indies' mentor.

The defeat marked the debut of "Milt" Jones in the Twilight League. Jones was mustered for seven hits but his mates did not give him any co-operation at all and kept kicking the ball all during the time he was attempting to wheeze the ball past the Independent batters.

Tonight on Leedom's field, the St. Ann's team will attempt to garner its first victory of the second half, meeting the Damp Wash A. A. A setback for the laundrymen will place them in the cellar.

FREAKS OF DROUGHT

MORRISON, Ia.—(INS)—One of the freak conditions attributed to this year's drought was seen in the cornfield of Bert H. Shimer, near here. In the field was corn just pushing its way through the ground, after a late start, and nearby, at the same time, other corn was tasseling. All the corn was planted at the same time, and, according to Shimer, the difference in growth was greater than he had ever seen.

PARKLAND DROPS FOURTH STRAIGHT; 'HIBOS' WIN

PARKLAND, July 18.—Parkland A. A. failed to produce in the pinches here last night with the result that it dropped its fourth straight game of the Lower Bucks County League. The Bristol Hibernians were the victors with the final tabulation being: Hibernians, 7; Parkland, 4.

Ten runners were stranded by the Parklanders. In the second and fourth innings, the side was retired with the bases loaded on both occasions. The Bristolians had six left on base.

Dave Ennis was the winning twirler and in chalking up the triumph allowed the Parkies four hits. He was continually in trouble due to very erratic fielding on the part of his mates but also managed to keep cool and collective in the hot spots. In the midst of a Parkland rally in the last frame, Ennis' twisters fanned Foster for the third out.

Man Charged With Illegal Possession of Liquor; Fined

PERKASIE, July 18.—Charged with the illegal possession of liquor, Leo C. Zernas, 69, of Perkassie R. D. 1, was arrested Monday afternoon by agents from the State Liquor Control Board.

Trooper Lawrence Prior, of Doylestown sub-station of State Police, and Constable A. R. Atkinson, of Doylestown.

Zernas had a 5-gallon still in his possession in a smokehouse on his farm, the officers charge. They seized the still and two and one-half quarts of alleged moonshine whiskey. When Zernas was arrested he told the officers that he has been drinking a quart of whiskey every day for the past twelve years, and that it was cheaper to make it than buy it at the liquor stores.

The prisoner was taken before Justice of the Peace W. Carlile Hobensack, Doylestown, where he was fined $25 and $10 costs.

Justice Hobensack released Zernas on his own recognizance, allowing him several days in which to raise the fine and costs.

Arbitration Vote Brings Hope For Strike Settlement

force peace among the warring elements.

On the far-flung coast battle front were General Hugh S. Johnson, stormy NRA administrator; United States Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York; P. A. Donaghue, chief examiner of the new National Labor Reference Board, and President Roosevelt's national longshoremen's board, mediation body, all moving quickly toward a truce and eventually peace.

Amid fierce rioting in the San Francisco sector and with strife in their ranks, union labor leaders here adopted a resolution urging the striking maritime unions and waterfront employers on the coast to submit to immediate arbitration by the National Longshoremen's Board.

An accomplishment of this, it was thought, would result in the immediate cessation of the fierce general strike now in its third paralyzing day in the National Guard-patrolled San Francisco Bay region and eventually in the settlement of the coast wide maritime strike, started more than two months ago and leading up to the general walkout in this vicinity.

Johnson, "cracking down" on labor and employers alike, and Donaghue were in San Francisco in addition to the longshoremen's board.

Wagner, one of the famous labor solons of the country, was in Portland, Oregon, easing a threatening general strike situation there.

But all were working together closely toward the one big goal—the ending of the general strike in the San Francisco Bay area, the ending of the Pacific coast maritime strike and the return to work by 140,000 striking men on the coast, 122,000 of whom are concentrated in and around the Golden Gate.

In Measured Phrase, Out The End of Main Street

There is no Spring on Main Street. Not a flower does it show. And only vagrant blades of grass. Just 'tween the cobbles grow. The Buds upon the Lady's hats. Seem almost real I ween. But blades of grass looks better still—A wearing of the green.

They perk up mighty bravely. As they greet the morning Sun; Neither Milk nor Baker's car. Can injure as they run. Up and down that Thorfare. Most everything I've seen. But nothing half so heartening. As Grass—just turning green.

The Electric Lights on Main Street. Brights all the shops at night. And hides the shabby greyness. That shames the broad day-light. Look above, where black the sky. There Nature's Chemists seem. A-mixing mighty pots of dye. To tint the landscape green.

I know where Morning Glories grow. And where the Cowslips hide; I know a hedge beside the Brook. Whose babbling waters glide; I know a lane that ambles on. Neath Trees, who's shadows screen—Just out the end of Main Street—Where Nature paints the Scene. —FITZ-RANDOLPH.

Everything that Science really knows about making cigarettes is used in making CHESTERFIELDS

LIGGETT & MYERS TOBACCO CO.

the cigarette that's Milder

the cigarette that TASTES BETTER

NO PRODUCT YOU CAN BUY is made under more sanitary conditions than you will find in the modern Chesterfield factories.

Everything used in making Chesterfield Cigarettes is scientifically tested for cleanliness and purity—and so ingenious is the machinery that the cigarette is hardly ever touched by hand.

EVEN THE AIR IN THE CHESTERFIELD FACTORIES IS CHANGED EVERY 4½ MINUTES

Every time you start to smoke a Chesterfield, remember this statement by a well-known physician:

"I have been something of a student of Cigarettes and it is my belief that they offer the mildest and purest form in which tobacco is used."
